ONE LAST THING FROM THIS MONTH'S MAGAZINE...

As hidden surprises go, it doesn't get much better than this...

Even on the face of it, Minotticucine's SETA kitchen is an aesthetic treat. Described by the manufacturer as 'the silk kitchen', this is not just a reference to its smooth appearance, but rather the fact that it incorporates real silk, safely encased between two sheets of glass to protect it while maintaining its striking visual qualities.

There's still more to this design than meets the eye though; at the touch of a button, a wine fridge rises up from the worksurface to deliver another little bit of unexpected – but very welcome – drama to the kitchen.

The kitchen and its neatly hidden wine fridge can be seen at Minotti's London showroom, located at Market Place just off Oxford Street. d
