INDUSTRIAL ACTION

Cooking up a storm calls for powerful extraction, especially if there is significant searing and steaming involved. For this large family home, designer Sarah Eilers was called to specify an industrial-grade extractor capable of handling serious entertaining. All without impeding the sight lines in the open concept space. The striking custom range hood anchors the generous island and is slightly wider and deeper than the hob dimensions to ensure no steam or odours escape around its sides. 'The vent, complete with dual piping, extracts both grease and carbon monoxide emissions generated by the gas stove, ensuring a clean and safe culinary environment,' says Sarah.

Bespoke vent hood by The Lonestar Range Hood Company; try Westin for similar. 6 burner range top with infra-red teppanyaki, £9,780. Wolf. Project by Lucas/Eilers Design Associates
